RE: Google Play and Apple App Store developer agreements

This exception request is for the UT System.

The University has a need to use Google Play and Apple App Store development modules. These contracts are listed online, and they are “contracts of adhesion” (the University has no ability to negotiate the terms with the supplier). Moreover, because Google and Apple maintain their respective terms and conditions online, Google or Apple could update their terms at any time, without any notice to UT.

Apple: <https://developer.apple.com/terms/>

Google: <https://play.google.com/about/developer-distribution-agreement.html>

These contracts contain multiple problematic provisions. And, at least in the case of Apple, I am unable to see all of the terms and conditions because Apple requires a user to log-in as a developer to see all of the terms.
